

Lori Armstrong Halber, Esq

Fox Rothchild LLP

Lori is a dynamic labor and employment attorney who combines a sophisticated grasp of business strategy, extensive litigation skills and deep experience with traditional labor.

As both a litigator and traditional labor lawyer, she has led industry-shaping cases (such as *PCC Structural*s (365 NLRB No. 160, 2017)) and has defended employers before a range of courts and administrative forums, earning impressive jury trial successes in disability, harassment and retaliation cases.* However, Lori's overall philosophy, shaped in part by her MBA, is to help employers proactively mitigate legal risks, galvanize workforces and create internal environments that set a course for greater profitability.

Lori is an experienced labor lawyer, serving as regional committee co-chair of the ABA's Committee on Practice and Procedure under the NLRA, as well as contributing editor to the Developing Labor Law treatise. Lori regularly represents employers before the NLRB, defends clients in grievance arbitrations and provides labor relations counselling (including formulating comprehensive and strategic union avoidance tactics). Lori is an accomplished negotiator, obtaining favorable collective bargaining agreements, including first contracts, for her clients.*
